

As the Practical Business school, we believe in the sharing of knowledge. The 'AIB Review' is published under a Creative Commons – Attributions-NoDerivatives licence and we invite you to share and republish our articles online or in print for free, as long as you meet our guidelines.

Republishing Guidelines (Print and Online)

- ▶ Authors (including their affiliations) must be credited in the byline.
- ▶ The AIB Review must be credited, and a link back to the article URL must be included.
- ▶ Articles must be published in its entirety with no edits. Should you wish to make edits, you need to contact the author(s) for approval prior to publication.
- ▶ You must check that you are allowed to republish images, charts, and/or interactive graphics that may be used in our articles. You are welcome to omit or substitute images, charts, and/or interactive graphics with your own.
- ▶ You cannot systematically republish the AIB Review, including the articles.

Exceptions:

- ▶ You may run the first few lines of the article as extracts; and provide a link back to the AIB Review article with "Read the full article at the AIB Review".
- ▶ You may quote sections of the article with a link back to the article URL.
- ▶ Author approvals are required for translations. You need to contact the author(s) for approval prior to publication.
- ▶ Articles can be republished in print, provided you credit the Author and the AIB Review. You do not need to provide the article URL link for print. We would appreciate if you can send a digital copy to copyright@aib.edu.au for archival purposes.
- ▶ Podcasts and video are covered by the Creative Commons licence, and you would need to credit the Author and the AIB Review.